WONDERFUL THINGS ART

... dedicated to creating highly accurate reproductions of ancient Egyptian artwork with a contemporary feel.

Every piece is hand-drawn by UK-based artist, Natalie Watson, following meticulous research into the history and symbolism of the original artwork.

Over 100 masterpieces of ancient artwork are available as fine art prints in a variety of sizes and formats, as well as greeting cards, postcards and bookmarks.

AS STOCKED BY

TUTANKHAMUN AND ANKHESENAMUN IN A FLORAL PAVILION

One of the masterpieces of ancient Egyptian art and workmanship, the golden throne of Tutankhamun features an evocative image of the young king with his wife, Ankhesenamun, in a floral pavilion. Picked out in a variety of precious metals and gemstones is Tutankhamun, reclining on a throne as Ankhesenamun rubs perfume into his shoulders from the bowl she is carrying.

Right: Reproduction of the backrest of the golden throne of Tutankhamun dated to c. 1336-1327 BC, now in the Egyptian Museum, Cairo (Art Ref: DP51).

COMMISSIONS

As a heritage collections specialist and archaeologist, I offer a research, digitisation and illustration service to create one-off commissions and bespoke content for merchandise, display or publication, including:

- Reproductions of objects, documents, sites and archaeological material
- Reconstructions of damaged artwork to give a better idea of the original appearance
- Fictional illustrations in the ancient Egyptian art style
- Bespoke historical information and detailed research on the art
- Digitisation, photography and cataloguing of historic material

I offer discounts for charities, education groups and academic institutions.

Right: Reproduction of a Naqada II period pottery jar dating to c. 3450 to 3330 BC, now in the Metropolitan Museum of Art collection (Art Ref: DP21)

Thoth

Thoth, an esteemed figure in Egyptian mythology, is the god of wisdom, writing, and the moon. Often portrayed as an ibis-headed deity or as a baboon, he was regarded as the divine scribe and inventor of hieroglyphs.

Thoth played a crucial role in maintaining balance and order, recording the judgments in the afterlife and mediating disputes among gods. He embodied the importance of intellect and communication and his association with knowledge and language made him a patron of scholars and scribes.

Horus

Horus, the falcon-headed god in Egyptian mythology, is a symbol of kingship, sky, and protection. He was revered as a celestial deity, associated with the sun and the pharaoh's divine right to rule. He was often depicted with a falcon head and the Eye of Horus, a powerful symbol of protection and healing.

Horus represents the continuity of kingship and divine protection in ancient Egyptian culture. His legend includes the battle against Seth for control of Egypt, symbolising the eternal struggle between order and chaos.

Anubis

Anubis is the ancient Egyptian jackal-headed god of mummification, the afterlife, and a symbol of both death and rebirth.

He guided souls through the transition from life to the afterlife, ensuring proper mummification and protection in the journey. He also presided over "Weighing of the Heart" ceremony, where a person's heart was weighed against the feather of Maat to determine their fate in the afterlife.

Sekhmet

Sekhmet, the lion-headed goddess in Egyptian mythology, is a symbol of both destruction and healing. Originally an aspect of Hathor, the goddess of healing, Sekhmet transformed when angered into the "Powerful One." As a fire-breathing lioness, she brought pestilence and plague.

She held the title "mistress of life," uniquely able to inflict and cure ailments, with her priests revered as powerful healers. Sekhmet is an intriguing figure, symbolising the delicate balance between destruction and healing.

Hathor

Hathor is the ancient Egyptian goddess of love, music, and motherhood. Often depicted with the head of a cow or cow horns, she is celebrated for her nurturing qualities, guiding souls into the afterlife and bestowing the gift of music and dance upon humanity.

Her intricate Menat necklace with its broad counterpoise and beaded strands, was worn by women during rituals and celebrations. It served as an amulet, believed to bring good fortune, ward off evil, and facilitate childbirth.

Ptah

Ptah is an ancient Egyptian creator deity and master craftsman. Often depicted as a mummified figure with a skullcap, he's associated with Memphis, a prominent city in ancient Egypt. As the patron of artisans and builders, he played a crucial role in shaping the world.

Ptah's creative powers were believed to bring all things into existence through his thoughts and words. His name, often translated as "the Opener," signifies his role in giving life to the universe through the spoken word, highlighting his revered position in Egyptian mythology.
