Research-Led Ancient Egyptian Art for Museums, Heritage Sites & Independent Retailers

Wonderful Things Art creates beautifully researched reproductions inspired by more than 3,000 years of ancient Egyptian art.

Created by artist Natalie Watson, each design is carefully redrawn from original archaeological sources, combining historical accuracy with contemporary presentation. The result is a distinctive collection that brings the art, stories and visual culture of ancient Egypt to modern audiences.

The collection now includes more than 120 exclusive designs, available as museum-quality Giclée prints, greeting cards and bookmarks. Products are proudly produced in the UK using carefully selected, premium materials.

Wonderful Things Art already supplies museums, galleries, heritage attractions and independent retailers across the UK, including the British Museum, Manchester Museum, World Museum Liverpool and the Petrie Museum.

What Customers Value

With more than 1,500 direct-to-customer sales and over 280 five-star reviews, Wonderful Things Art has a strong track record of customer satisfaction. Reviews consistently praise the authenticity, quality and individuality of the artwork, with customers frequently returning to purchase additional designs or choosing pieces as gifts. This strong repeat appeal reflects the distinctive, collectable nature of the collection.

Authentic & distinctive

Every design is recreated from a real ancient source, with careful attention to imagery, colour and hieroglyphs. Customers particularly value the opportunity to own artwork depicting genuine scenes and objects from ancient Egypt, rather than generic Egyptian-themed designs.

Beautiful & giftable

Vivid colour, fine detail and high-quality materials are frequently praised in customer reviews. Products are bought as gifts for Egyptology enthusiasts, travellers, friends and family, while cards and prints are often kept, displayed or framed.

Something different

Customers regularly comment that the designs are unlike other Egyptian artwork they have encountered. This gives the collection particular appeal to independent and specialist retailers looking for products with a strong sense of originality and character.

More than a souvenir

The stories and historical context behind each design give customers another reason to engage with the artwork. Products can introduce audiences to Egyptian gods, mythology, daily life and ancient artistic traditions, making them particularly well suited to museum shops, heritage venues and cultural retailers.

Designed to collect

With more than 120 designs, the collection offers customers accessible gifts alongside larger art prints, creating opportunities to discover, collect and return to the range over time.

Illustration Services

Alongside the retail collection, Natalie Watson provides bespoke historical illustration and reconstruction services for museums, publishers and heritage organisations.

Services include:

- Historically accurate reproductions of artefacts, wall paintings, papyri and inscriptions
- Digital reconstructions of damaged, faded or fragmentary ancient artwork
- Original illustrations informed by ancient Egyptian artistic traditions
- Artwork for exhibitions, interpretation panels, publications and educational resources
- Bespoke merchandise and gift-shop designs
- Historical research to support interpretation and visual storytelling

Every commission is tailored to the requirements of the project and informed by archaeological evidence, museum collections and comparative research.

Whether restoring lost colour, reconstructing a damaged scene or creating original artwork inspired by ancient Egyptian traditions, the aim is always the same: to make the ancient world visually accessible while respecting the evidence behind it.

Seshat

ššꜣt

The goddess Seshat represents wisdom, knowledge, and writing. She is depicted as a woman wearing a leopard skin dress and a headdress resembling a seven-pointed star.

Seshat was the patroness of architects and scribes and played a crucial role in recording history, measuring time, and overseeing the construction of temples and monuments.

As the 'Lady of the Library' she symbolises the importance of literacy and scholarship in ancient Egyptian society, embodying the pursuit of wisdom and the preservation of knowledge.
